1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Purdy et al (US 2003/0095068).

Purdy et al teach a method of transmitting a plurality of signals from a common antenna including generating (fig. 1) a first signal for transmission via a first transmit beam, generating (fig. 1) a second signal for transmission via a second transmit beam, forming (p. 3, paragraph 0031) a composite signal that includes the first and second signals, wherein the phase of the composite signal accounts for signal modulation and beam forming characteristics of the first and second signals (p. 2, paragraph 0023), supplying (fig. 2) the composite signal to the common antenna, and transmitting (fig. 1) the composite signal from the common antenna.

With regard to claims 14-27, Purdy et al further teach an apparatus for transmitting a plurality of signals including a phased array antenna 16 comprising an array of antenna elements, a transmitter system (fig. 1) that receives a first signal for transmission via a first transmit beam and a second signal for transmission via a second transmit beam, the transmitter system forming a plurality of composite signals and supplying the plurality of composite signals to respective antenna elements of the phased array antenna, wherein phases of the composite signals are a function of signal modulations of the first and second signals and phases of the respective antenna elements required to form the first and second transmit beams (p. 2, paragraph 0023), wherein the phased array antenna transmits (fig. 1) the first signal via the first transmit beam and transmits (fig. 1) the second signal via the second transmit beam.

3. Claims 1-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by King (Pat. No. 3,872,477).

King teaches an apparatus and a method of transmitting a plurality of signals from a common antenna including generating (col 9, lines 58- 62) a first signal for transmission via a first transmit beam, generating (col 9, lines 58- 62) a second signal for transmission via a second transmit beam, forming (col 1, lines 42-48)) a composite signal that includes the first and second signals, wherein the phase of the composite signal accounts for signal modulation and beam forming characteristics of the first and second signals (col 1, lines 50+), supplying (col 5, lines 58-67) the composite signal to the common antenna, and transmitting (col 5, lines 58-67; col 9, lines 58-62) the composite signal from the common antenna.

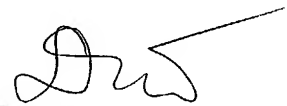

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
